ONCE more, we note, the so-called " Heavensent Barrier" is occupying the attention of the Shanghai community. The Woosung Bar has been a vexed question and standing grievance in the Model Settlement almost ever since the opening of Shanghai as a Treaty Port. An impediment to the navigation of the Hwang-poo from the first, is gradually became a more and more serious obstacle until large ocean-going steamers were at length habitually detained for hours outside this obstruction, great less being thereby caused to shipowners and great in convenience caused to merchants and others engaged in trade. The subject was not quite a new one to Colone DENBY, although he is comparatively new to winced to find the bill of fare headed with the Woosung Bar, for it is about a year since us that though nothing could be done with the Canton River, the Woosung Bar was to be taken in band at once,

There is a steam capstan preventing the river at Woosung silting up further, even with the extremely limited use made of it, we may fairly conclude that under European superintendence it might was imported. In any case the Chinese all removable obstructions to the navigation of the river, and it is the duty of the Foreign Ministers to insist that the dredger shall be regularly employed at Woosing.

BOTANIC GARDENS. 9.—Fountain Terrace.—The improvements long projected, and referred to in my Report for 1884, were commenced in the beginning of 1885, by removing from the western end of the terrace trees which were neither very ornamental nor useful, or which were represented adequately by specimens of the same species in other parts of the Gardens. They were not in keeping with their position and surroudings and the The above Bill was considered in committee formal arrangement of this popular and beauand was reported with sundry amendments on | tiful portion of the Gardens. The work of converting different kinds should be cultivated in these the remaining, and larger portion of the ground on the eastern side of the Fountain has been resumed lately, and it will be completed very soon. The arrangement adopted for the improvement of the terrace is designed for two purposes. One is to replace the large trees with plants of a more suitable nature for the character of the place. The other object is to provide a suitable place for concentrating the collection of roses. The roses have hithertobsen cultivated in various scattered parts of the Gardens, a method resulting in inconvenience and loss of time in management, as well as exposing the flowers to the espidity of visitors and professional thieves. For some years flowers in general and roses in particular have received careful and regular attention from flower stealers, who have learnt one place where they can be more readily soon.

For the convenience of visitors, and the improvement of the end of the avenue, a flight of steps has been made up the bank, and some rock work on each side has been constructed and planted with ornamental foliage plants, which will grow in the shady situation. - 12.—Epiphytal Orchids (Phalaeropsis spn.

have been placed on the trunks of the Gravilles (Silky Oak) trees which compose the avenue. The suitability of the climate for the cultivation of Phalonops is has yet to be proved. So far the orchids, although they were only indifferent specimens of vigour when placed on the trees, seem to afford a promise of success, but the cold of winter, which is not vet over, is the severest trial they have to contend with.

13.—Trees and plants of value and beauty which were in danger of having their symptoical neighbours which had already fulfilled the purposes for which they were originally planted, and which were afterwards occupying the places of interlopers, have been going through a course of ejection for saveral months. A couple of foresers have been comployed to do this carefully There are still of some kinds of trees for more individuals than there should be in the Gardons, which must gradually by withdrawn. Until this is done it will be impossible to provide suitably for and to introduce trees of new, beautiful, and interesting forms.

14.—Palms.—A very considerable augmentation of these has taken place. 26.—Bamboo.—In my annual report for 1882 I stated that I had brought together in one collection twenty five kinds of bamboos. These have continued to do well, and some further additions have been made. I hope whenever there is an opportunity to still further increase the collection. The bamboos of China are of great interest and utility and many of them are probably unknown to science. It is impossible to assign them to their true places in systematic botany until flowers are obtained from which a complete and satisfactory study of them can be made. The bamboo flowers at such long intervals that if we trust to travellers being able to furnish the desired flowering specimens the day will be very far distant when the study will have Gardens, is that when flowers are produced they can be immediately secured for investigation. 27.-A year or two ago Dr. MucGowan kindly sent me specimens of the very interesting square stommed baraboo, but unfortunately they did not survive the passage. 31.- Vitis Martinii (?)-The Cochin China vine again yielded a very heavy crop of fruit. This has received a good deal of attention in America where it is being experimented with as a new wine producer. For this purpose it has been spoken of favourably. It is possible that in some climates which are nusuitable for the cultivation of the gransvine this one might be of considerable service. I tried the fruit in tarts, and the flavour was found to be good and palatable, but the large seeds are objectionable: however, it is possible that this drawback might be diminished in time by cultivation. The large leaves of the plant give it a distinguished and ornamental appearance which is an additional recommendation for its finding a place in tropical gardons, if not even in hot houses of temperate climates.

33.—Plant Sales.—The demand for plants continues to steadily increase. During the vear 1,918 plants were sold, and they realised $409.35. development dangerously interfered with by which is an excess of $137.50 over the sales for 1885. The sales would have been greater if the supply had been equal to the demand. Means are not adequate for the cultivation of certain kinds of plants, but I hope that a re-arrangement of nursery appliances, and an extension of the ground which will be effected this year will place us in a botter position to meet public requirements, and a growing taste for, plants. A Glass-house fifty feet long is course of construction, when finished it will be used for propagation and growth of delicate plants which in the early stages of growth require its protection. When Correspondence has been mis-sent or delayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addressee need do is to note on the cover, Sent to ---- , or Recoved at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward it, without any other writing whatever, to the Postmaster-General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the end.

LOCAL DELIVERY-No delivery is attempted on board Ship, at the Peak, Kowloon, Aberdeen. &c., nor at any private house (even though named in the address) when there is a place of business nearer, at which delivery can be effected.

The authorised List of Mails issued in connection with this paper is the one published twice each, day in our Extra, which is always corrected to a much later hour than that given A MAIL WILL CLOSE.
